PROPOSAL I.F. 2-51
TO FIX THE SEASON AND CREEL LIMIT ON TROUT AND THE SEASON ON LARGE MOUTH, SMALL MOUTH AND SPOTTED BASS

A meeting of the Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries was held at Richmond, Virginia, February 26, 1951 at which meeting a proposal hereinafter stated was authorized. A further meeting will be held at Richmond, Virginia, March 23, 1951 at which time said proposal will be acted upon.
That the open angling season for trout shall be from 12 o'clock noon May 1 to one hour after sunset, September 15 Eastern Standard Time, and from one hour before sunrise to one hour after sunset on intervening days; that the creel limit shall be eight trout per day.
That the open angling season for large mouth, small mouth and spotted bass shall be from June 1 to December 31 west of the Blue Ridge Mountains and June 1 to March 15 east of the Blue Ridge Mountains.
That all regulations or parts of regulations in conflict with the foregoing be rescinded.
By order of the Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries.
Beverley W. Stras, Jr.,
Chairman.

March 3, 1951.

To Whom It May Concern:
There has been rumors around the Appomattox Garment Company that C. T. Moss has come to the Garment factory and told not to let Maxine and Della Thomas stop work because they still owed for an automobile that I had recently traded for. This car was paid for by E. L. Thomas who received. If I hear anymore rumors of that kind you will be punished by the staff of Virginia law. If you fail to prove it you will be punished accordingly. It is very true that we worked at the Garment Company during the walkout but we find it is a decent place to work if you work and not try to tend to other people's business.

Ocean Crab Research Studies Parasite Action

Ocean crabs may not approve, but many of them are providing free room, board and transportation for a bunch of pernicious parasites.
It has been commonly held that these parasites, single-celled units of life distantly related to those of malaria, were not harmful to their genial hosts, but Dr. Gordon H. Ball, zoologist on the Los Angeles campus of the University of California, has found that sometimes colonies of these protozoa can produce damaging effects.
"For some time it has been held that since there are relatively few of these non-tissue-dwelling parasites inside the crab and since they do not multiply within the body of the host, they can therefore not be harmful," explains Dr. Ball.
"However, the parasites have been observed to possess a tendency to cling to anything they touch, thus keeping them in contact with tissues and with one another."
When colonies of these protozoa accumulate around the small ducts within the crab's body, they can completely close the duct opening. The direct pressure of the colonies can destroy certain cells or can undermine and cause peeling of other cells.
Dr. Ball hastened to point out that these parasites are not harmful to humans, should the infested crabs be eaten.
"In the laboratory the crabs show no marked unhealthiness because of their parasites. They don't even seem to be aware of their presence."

Chicago Doctors Trace Effects of Cortisone

How cortisone, the drug which has already shown promise in treating arthritis and rheumatic fever, suppresses the symptoms of serum sickness in experimental animals, was demonstrated by two University of Chicago doctors before the central society for clinical research.
Dr. Robert H. Ebert, assistant professor of medicine, and Dr. Robert W. Wissler, assistant professor of pathology, in the university's medical research center, described experiments which used the new "window on disease," developed by Ebert to check the effects of cortisone.
The "window" is a transparent, two-piece plastic device, the size of a half dollar. It clips over a circle of thin and surgically exposed tissues of a rabbit's ear, and allows doctors to examine the minute changes that disease causes in living tissue as they occur. Using the window, investigators can also trace the way drugs curb the effect of disease.
Technically called a rabbit ear chamber, the window neither harms nor hampers the rabbit.
To test the effect of cortisone in treating serum sickness—which can occur in humans as the result of proteins found in serums used for disease prevention—the doctors gave eleven rabbits sensitizing shots. Five of the rabbits were treated with cortisone before receiving a final sensitizing shot three weeks later.

Carbon Monoxide

One may wonder why carbon monoxide, after is has cooled, does not settle down to the earth and kill us. Carbon monoxide is produced by the incomplete burning of coal and other materials containing carbon. It does not settle back to the ground for two reasons. First, it is lighter than air, even when cool. Also mixtures of gases do not separate from each other, but rather tend to diffuse and so distribute themselves evenly. Carbon monoxide in the air is oxidized to carbon dioxide, and so it does not build up to harmful concentrations.

Costume Jewelry

Labradorite, known as the "peacock" of "fire" rock of Canada's northeastern coast and named for it, is one of the newest substances available to the merchants of glitter for the production of costume jewelry. The beautifully iridescent member of the feldspar family will join a wide assortment of materials used by a trade that is said to have revolutionized the jewelry world within the past 15 years.

Give Woolens a Rest

Giving wool clothes a few day's rest now and then will add weeks to their life. Frequent or prolonged sitting in a garment may cause it to bulge or stretch out of shape. A rest allows the wool to spring back and wrinkles to fall out so that less pressing is needed. Wool clothes should also hang straight on hangers, and they should not be pressed tightly in a close closet. Woolens need air as well as space.

Fascinating Finish

A finish has been developed which forms patterns, varying from minute crystals to long needles which resemble frost formations on a window. These novelty crystalline finishes are made in clear coatings as well as in all colors. They are both opaque and translucent and are used on a host of surfaces including glass, steel, brass, aluminum, some plastics and even close-grained wood.

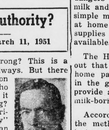
By What Authority?

Lesson for March 11, 1951

Is it right or wrong? This is a fair question always. But there is another question ... go with it. Who ... may whether it ... right or wrong? ... is the authori... "authority" ... more than ... is." It means ... final judge, the ... court of last ap...



Dr. Foreman

Rather You nor the Crowd
SOME SAY: Nobody can tell me what to do! I do as I please. I'm no authority I am bound to recognize. Such a person has an authority, all the same: himself or him. "What I want" and "what I think" are the only reasons for acting and all the reasons he needs.
But aside from the fact that such people are a nuisance to all concerned, and the fact that they can't even pretend to be Christians, this point of view don't work. The person who acts as his own authority is into others who take them... ces as their authority, and the result is the awful mess called anarchy. So all sensible people do recognize some authority outside themselves. They want approval from outside, from above.
But whose approval do they want? Under whose jurisdiction, the lawyers would say, do they serve? Some recognize only that vague and vague authority known as "Everybody." If everybody does it, it must be right. If nobody does it, it's bound to be wrong.
Conscience, Code, Conscience
ANOTHER proposed authority, believe it or not, is the calendar. ... people will not read a book ... a show or wear a dress or ... music that isn't up to the ... If it's "dated" it's dead, ... the date is today.
That is silly, on the face of it. ... there are other more respectable authorities which are still not ... Authority. One of these is the ... If it's legal it's right, say some people, and it can't be right unless ... here is something true in this, ... course. We should by all means ... by the laws, and also see that ... laws are made and bad ones ... mended. But law is not the final ... What is right and wrong. Lawmakers can make mistakes. What is good law at one time may be bad law under other circumstances.
The best laws can never catch up with the morals of the best people. Still other people take it as their authority conscience, ... ing their own consciences. ... is not quite the same as ... ing your own wishes or ... sure for your guide. WHAT, THEN, is the highest authority for the Christian? Nothing and no one less than Jesus ... himself. As we were thinking a few weeks ago, the very ... "Christ" is a symbol of authority at the highest level.
In Jesus' day there were two supreme smybols of God: the Law and the Temple. Jesus not only assumed superiority to the Law, but (as our Lesson reminds us) of the Temple itself, though he was no priest and had no ecclesiastical position whatever. If there is a difference between Christian and non-Christian today, it is not that Jesus ... the authority for one and ... for the other; rather it is ... the non-Christian refuses ... recognize what is the fact: ... for us and for all men, ... Health Dept. Advises on Milk Use

Dr. L. J. Roper, State Health Commissioner, today emphasized the dangers of drinking unpasteurized milk and called attention to some simple methods of heat-treating milk at home in the event community supplies of pasteurized milk are not available.
The Health Commissioner pointed out that there are three approved home pasteurization methods which in the great majority of cases will provide adequate safeguards against milk-borne disease.
According to Dr. Roper, one of the methods—which may in some instances impart a cooked flavor to the milk—is recommended primarily for emergency situations in which some community milk processing plants may be put out of commission by fire, flood, or other disasters, including bombing attacks.
The other two methods, which do not affect the flavor of the milk, but take a little longer or require special equipment, are suggested for normal home use where pasteurized milk is not available.
"There are too many communities in Virginia where raw milk is drunk regularly despite its recognized threat to health," Dr. Roper said.
The emergency method recommended by the State Health Commissioner:
Bring milk quickly to a boil in an open saucepan while stirring constantly. Immediately place saucepan in cold water and continue stirring contents until cool. Change cooling water whenever it becomes warm.
Dr. Roper pointed out that although pasteurization destroys harmful bacteria, it is not effective against radioactive contamination.
For residents of communities where there is little or no pasteurized milk, the State Health Commissioner recommends that raw milk be pasteurized at home, either by emergency method recommended for disasters or by one of the two following methods:
1. Heat the milk quickly in an open saucepan, stirring constantly, until the contents reach a temperature of 165 degrees F. A dependable cooking thermometer should be used. Then immediately place the saucepan in cold water and continue stirring the contents until they are cool. Change the cooling water when it becomes warm.
2. Use one of the approved home pasteurizers now on the market.
"Statistics show that consumers of raw milk are the victims of most of the outbreaks of milk-borne diseases in this country," Dr. Roper explained.

Mr. J. W. Rush

Funeral services for John Willie Rush, who died Monday, February 26, after a long illness were held at Trinity Methodist Church, Red House, of which he was a member, on Tuesday at four o'clock P. M. Burial was in the Rush Family Cemetery nearby. Rev. J. R. McKinney, pastor, was in charge. Pallbearers were: William Rush, Wilson Marshall, Charles Cumby, Jim Williamson, Lewis Smith and Thornton Marshall. The flowers were carried by neices.
He was born in Appomattox County June 16, 1893, the eldest son of the late Charles Harrison and Rhoda Jennings Rush. On December 2, 1915, he was married to Miss Lovalene Harvey, who died in July, 1935. He is survived by one son, John Wilson Rush, of Kenbridge, and two daughters, Mrs. S. C. Curtis and Mrs. Kathryn Clore, of Alexandria, and three grandchildren, Jane Rush, Bobby Clore and Susan Curtis; four brothers, A. H. Rush, S. C. Rush and J. H. Rush, of Red House and A. W. Rush, of Lynchburg; three sisters, Mrs. H. M. Cumby, Mrs. J. H. Marshall, of Lynchburg and Mrs. F. C. Armistead, of Brookneal.

Game Body Regulations

At the February 26 meeting of the Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries in Richmond, the following proposals were ordered published for a hearing to be held on March 23, at which time time they will be adopted or rejected.
Most important of the new proposals is the one to fix the season and creel limit on trout and the season on largemouth, smallmouth, and spotted bass.
It is now proposed that the open season on trout shall be from 12:00 o'clock noon of May 1, until one hour after sunset, September 15, Eastern Standard time, and from one hour before sunrise to one hour after sunset on intervening days. The proposed new creel limit on trout would be eight fish per day.
It was also proposed that the open season on the various bass species run from June 1 to December 31 west of the Blue Ridge Mountains, and from June 1 to March 15 east of the Blue Ridge.
The Commission also proposed new regulations which would: close certain sections of the South Holston Reservoir, and the South Holston and Middle Fork of the Holston River; make a change in the Sunday regulations for Botetourt County; prohibit the use of trot and lay lines in Grayson County; prohibit fishing in Craig and Johns Creeks in Craig County; and extend the open season for taking walleyed pike in the New River so that it would run from June 1 to March 31 each year.
The Commission further decided that all Commission - controlled ponds, the creel and size limits for the various species would conform to statewide regulations. In addition, the ruling banning the use of outboard motors on these ponds was modified to permit the use of electric motors, since it was felt that this type of motor was not objectionable from the standpoint of noise or pollution of the water from overflow oils and gasoline, and was much less likely to stir up and disturb the waters.

RATEOF FOREST PLANTING SHOULD BE S IEEDED UP

A seeded-up reforestation program in Virginia to put idl acres back into production is being advised by J. W. O'Byrne, Extension forester at V. P. I.
O'Byrne says the area in Virginia in need of reforestation is variously estimated between 200,00 and 1,000,000 acres. The smaller figure probably represents land that will not reseed naturally to anything. The larger figure is used to represent land that will not reseed naturally to a profitable stand of trees.
At the present rate of planting, it will take between 50 to 200 years to accomplish the needed reforestation, O'Byrne says.
He reports that Virginia landowners planted 5,474,000 forest trees in the 1949-50 planting season. This added to the 27,000,000 planted in former years, makes a total of almost 33,000,000 trees that have been planted since systematic forestry work was started in the state in the early 1930's. At the usual rate of 1,000 trees per acre, the total area planted to forest trees is 32,912 acres. Of these, 85 per cent are classed as successful plantations. The other 15 per cent either had poor survival, or were destroyed by fire, browsing livestock, or other means.

HOMEMAKERS' ITEMS

When you're serving on plastic materials, "bases" with paper clips - not pins or a needle and thread. Plastic shouldn't be punctured, except by the permanent stitching.
Use double yarn to knit the elbows in children's sweaters. Like knitting a double heel on a man's sock, it will prolong the wear on the garment.
If raveled yarn is full of kinks, wind it around a glass jar as you unravel it. Dip the jar in warm water and let the yarn dry. Then, when you're ready to knit, it will be soft and usable.
